

Elm Creek XC Series Race Report: Week 1, December 5, 2018

Another season of cross country skiing is off to a great start, with the cold temps allowing Elm Creek to open before Thanksgiving for Nordic skiing. This meant Week 1 of the Elm Creek XC Series was able to be on snow Wednesday, December 5, for the full 2.5K man-made snow loop. 22 skiers were in the field for the freestyle race. Taking the men's skate win was Dennis Curran in 12:53, closely followed by Laszlo Alberta and Grant Hietpas. Not far behind in first place for the women was Libby Tuttle, with Sydney Peterson in second and Lisa Garretson in third. Fourteen classic racers followed up for the night's second sprint. Ben Mullin and Libby Tuttle were battling hard for the overall win, each taking first in their respective fields in just over 16 minutes. Sydney Peterson and Jay Wenner also had a mano-a-mano race for overall third place, each taking second place in their fields. This year, skiers may sign up for the full series at the beginning of the season. However, even if they choose not to, all racers are still automatically calculated into the points for "Best of Six" for the season. The "Best of" series has separate divisions for both freestyle and classic, sponsored by Pioneer Midwest.
